Test your Brain with these 3 Visual Illusions

1

Are the horizontal lines straight or crooked?

2

Do you see gray dots at the intersections of the white lines?

3

Are the two orange circles of the same size?

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS :

1. Café Wall Illusion

The horizontal lines are straight, even though they do not seem straight. In this illusion, the vertical zigzag patterns disrupt our horizontal perception.

2. Hermann grid illusion

There are not gray dots in this grid. However “ghostlike” gray blobs are perceived at the intersections of the white lines. The gray dots disappear when looking directly at an intersection. This illusion can be explained by a neural process happening in the visual system called lateral inhibition (the capacity of an active neuron to reduce the activity of its neighbors).

3. The Ebbinghaus Illusion

The two orange circles are exactly the same size, even though the one on the left seems smaller. This size distortion may be caused by the size of the surrounding circles or by their distance to the center circle.
